Established in Birmingham as The Midland Daffodil Society in 1898, The Daffodil Society is the specialist society of Great Britain for all who are interested in the Genus Narcissus, by way of exhibiting, breeding or just lovers of the true heralds of spring.

Daffodils are one of the most popular of all garden plants and appear in over 80 of gardens, where they create a real welcome splash of colour to brighten the days and indicate that winter is over. Gone are the days when daffodils were only yellow. The modern hybrids come in many different colours and combinations of colours and range in size from exhibition flowers 5 inches across in diameter to dainty miniatures barely an inch across and growing only a few inches in height.

The Daffodil Society aims, through its publications and activities, to help those who have an interest in the genus to gain a greater pleasure from their association with the flower. In the Midlands in April, the Society holds its Annual Show, where a full range of cultivars, representing all types and colours of show flowers, may be seen. There is no charge for members attending the show and no entry fees for exhibitors. This important two-day event provides opportunities for members to show their flowers, meet with other members and acquire experience and knowledge. Additionally The Society promotes a class at The Royal Horticultural Society's Daffodil Shows in London and is closely associated with a range of classes at The Harrogate Spring Show.

The Journal and The Newsletter are the Society's two annual publications issued free to all Members and Affiliated Societies. The Journal, giving advice on cultivation, hybridisation and other topics, as well as a Show Calendar is published in February.

The Newsletter, giving results of daffodil shows and comments on the season etc., is published in the Autumn.

The Society also has a website at
